HOME ECONOMICS GRADS READILY FOUND JOBS

Blacksburg, Va.- Which should a girl do—marry or work, or both?

Home economics graduates from six Virginia colleges last June had and took their many opportunities to do both, according to figures just compiled by the Virginia Home Economics Association and released here this week by Miss Ruth Jamison, president of the Association.

Employers of home economists snapped up the available graduates, including 20 of the 26 who were married. They requested of each college from 10 to 37 more graduates than colleges had to fill openings. Of those 26 married, 15 were married at the time of graduation, and 11 immediately after graduation. Six are now full-time homemakers.

In releasing the study, Miss Jamison pointed out, "Such figures are quite usual in our professional field. A home economist is trained for both professional service and homemaking, and finds both easier to combine is she chooses."

"We want every Virginia girl, looking toward college next fall, to know of the need and thus the great opportunities for immediate and pleasant employment after graduation," Miss Jamison said. "Take a look at the wide range of positions which these graduates entered last June. Any girl caoosing home economics training, may work in the field of her choice, as well as be trained for marriage and homemaking."

Bachelor of science degrees were awarded to 82 senior girls at the Virginia colleges last June, and 73 are now employed by choice.

They entered 15 different types of home economics work: 44, teaching; 4, Extension home demonstration work; 8, institution dietetics—general and VA hospital service, hospital dietetics internships, and school cafeteria management;

Nine, business—6, home service departments of electric and gas utilities, 2 in textiles and interior decoration, 1 in clothing;

Two, nursery school work; 1, social welfare and public health; 1, airline service; 1, civil service; and 3, graduate scholarships for further study in home economics.

More such graduates are needed, according to the survey, to fill positions as teachers, Extension home economists, institution dietitians and in various Virginia industries requiring trained home economists.

These six Virginia colleges, covered in the survey, offer the 4-year home economics course leading to the B. S. degree: Bridgewater College, Bridgewater; Longwood College, Farmville; Madison College, Harrisonburg; Mary Washington College, Fredericksburg; Radford College, Radford, and V. P. I., Blacksburg, the latter also offering graduate training in home economics.

NEWS from HOLLYWOOD

The Film Daily has announced that Ernest Borgnine and Jenifer Jones have been voted the best actor and actress of 1955 in an annual poll of film critics. Mr. Borgnine took top place in the periodical's Filmdom's Famous Five citations for his portrayal of the title role in "Marty." Miss Jones' citation was for her work in "Love Is a Many Splendered Thing."

It is interesting to note that "Marty" also figured in two other classifications — Delbert Mann was rated the year's best director for his work on "Marty" and Paddy Chayefsky's script of the film got the nod as the best screen play of 1955.

Jean Simmons is to star in RKO's projected remake of "Morning Glory," issued by the studio in 1933 with Katherine Hepburn, starred. Ruth and Augustus Goetz, who wrote the original screen play, will do the same for the revised version.

As his first directing assignment, Don McGuire finished the film end of Frank Sinatra's "Johnny Concho," with only 3 weeks of shooting. Don has been a writer and has directed shorts and TV but Sinatra gave him the opportunity to direct his first full-length picture.

Two of Nobel prize-winner William Faulkner's stories, "Sound and Fury," and "Soldier Fay," have been bought by Jerry Wald. John Kerr will probably star in the latter film.

When "The Leather Saint" is made, with John Derek starred, the principal character will be an Episcopalian minister instead of a Catholic priest, who turns to prize fighting to raise money for his poor church. The change was made so that a romantic situation could be developed in the story.

With Clark Gable in mind, R.K. O. beat all other studios to the draw and bought "Cash McCall," a best-seller novel. They hope and pray Gable will play the lead character, who is described as a dreamboat to women and a high financier among men. It was written by Cameron Hawley, who also wrote, "Executive Suite."

Twentieth Century - Fox has signed Geoffrey Toone, British actor, to play the role of Deborah Kerr's suitor in "The King and I." Toone has appeared on the screen in "Sword of Honor," made in England and in "Captain Lightfoot," which Universal filmed in Ireland.

POSTMASTER GENERAL GIVES REPORT

Postmaster General Arthur E. Summerfield, in a report delivered to the Speaker of the House and the President of the Senate, has disclosed that some 506,000 postal employees were placed in new salary schedules December 3, as the final step of a new salary law which gave them total wage increases averaging 8.4 per cent, at a cost of $179 million a year.

The report supplied detailed information on how the Post Office Department assigned its field employees to new salary schedules of the recent wage law, known as the Postal Field Service Act of 1955 (Public Law 68).

Commenting on the report, Postmaster General Summerfield said:

"Putting this law into effect was a highly complicated task due to the wide variety of occupations involved, the geographical dispersion of employees and the sheer number of positions involved. Yet, it was completed on schedule by our Bureau of Personnel within the required six months after enactment of the law on last June 19, and the reclassification of our postal employees into the new wage schedule was fully achieved on December 3, 1955."

Public Law 68 gave all postal employees, except a relative few Departmental employees who are covered under other salary legislation, a 6 per cent flat pay increase, retroactive to March 1, 1955.

NITROGEN NEEDED FOR SMALL GRAINS

Plenty of available nitrogen during the early spring is essential for profitable small grain production, [illegible]

That's the reminder from G. Epperson, asociate agronomist at V. P. I., who says that use of nitrogen as a topdressing is particularly important following high yields of crops during the previous good growing season, when large amounts of plant food nutrients were used.

Soil fertility is a primary factor in determining the amount of nitrogen to use. On medium fertile soils 20 to 25 pounds per acre will usually be enough. Low fertility or sandy soils generally need more nitrogen, probably us to 50 pounds per acre.

Soils with high fertility will usually need additional nitrogen, particularly those with high organic content. Nitrogen should be used with care to prevent lodging on small grain. However, any nitrogen that can be used up to the point of promoting lodging, will be profitable if applied at the proper time.

On soils low in phosphorus and potash, a complete fertilizer applied at the rate to give the suggested amounts of nitrogen is recommended.

Yates May Be Only Convention Candidate

It appeared today that E. Floyd Yates, of Pewhatan, would be the only candidate from the 11th State Senatorial District, which includes Appomattox County, in the March 5 State Constitutional Convention.

The deadline for candidates to file is this Saturday at midnight.

Election of the delegates, one from each state senatorial district, will be held on February 21. Virginia voters approved the calling of the convention in a special referendum on January 9. Purpose of the convention will be to amend the State Constitution to remove a barrier to the use of public money for a child's education at a private, non-sectarian school.

Yates, former member of the House of Delegates, is state treasurer of the Defenders of State Sovereignty and Individual Liberties. He served in the House from 1940 to 1950.

Yates was in Appomattox County early this week, contacting friends as to his candidacy to the convention. No others have been announced, and unless some one files by midnight Saturday, he will be uppposed on the February 21 ballot.

The convention will have 40 members, one for each of the state senatorial districts.

Yates is a farmer, automobile and oil dealer. He is chairman of the Powhatan County Democratic Committee.

Deadline to secure absentee ballots for the Feb. 21 vote, will be Saturday, Feb. 18, and voters must be registered by Feb. 12, and have paid their poll tax by last Dec. 12.

January is always the month in [illegible] when we recall Lee and Jackson. I have done more research on Jackson than on Lee. Here are some notes I came across in my "stonewall" file:—He suffered from dyspepsia. He wrote. "For twenty years I have suffered agony from dyspepsia." He always worried about his stomach (as does your author). While Jackson was stationed at Fort Hamilton in Florida, a doctor set up a rigid diet for him. No wise bread. He was allowed meat, huckleberries when available. And milk. And lemon juice. One could write a book about his eating habits. Especially the lemons. And he referred to stand up while he ate. He figured that standing up was a natural position for his internal organs and that was that. No butter on his bread. He would not touch the white of an egg. His soldiers were often weary and often hungry, but when they saw Old Jack by on Sorrel, sucking a lemon, they knew the leader was all right! Lemons were a "must" on the list of the Stonewall Brigade. How he got them through all the blockades is one of the mysteries of the war.

Jackson had a bright idea for all [illegible] arrived late at Sunday School. [illegible] locked the door on them!

And how honest he was. Once after midnight, he decided he had given a student at VMI an incorrect answer to a question in his class. Jackson arose, dressed, and walked through the streets of Lexington in the eirie hours before dawn to arouse the student and make amends. Has there ever been such a meticulous teacher!

As one waxes old in occupation of the editorial chair, one feels the need for more filing cabinets. Answers to Betsy, so much material we must shun the waste paper basket. Even after we pour it into the typesetting machines and the printed sheet, we still like to keep the original copy and the research that preceded it. Often at night, I ramble through a maze of clippings and old papers piled around, over and about my desk in my den at home. And I find such as-:

Going through a book from the Appomattox County Library, between pages 166 and 167, I found a folded green leaf lovingly pressed. Who had put it there? Why had the leaf saved to start with? Surely not just as a book marker. Could the "Keep Virginia Green" people like to get this item?

On the grand scale— one can see George Washington, Robert E. Lee and George Marshall as solid, competent commanders in American history. But there is another group — a group of swashbuckling individuals, who were unpredictable and often eccentric. And on this list would come Andrew Jackson, Stonewall Jackson and George Patton. In the case of Lee and Jackson, they made a great team, but never forget that they were opposites in many angles of temperment and ways of doing things.

.... Dr. C. A. Collins, Jr.

CollinsTalksOn 'International Understanding'

Dr. Carl A. Collins, Jr., minister of Liberty Baptist Church, was guest speaker at a meeting of the Junior Woman's Club of Appomattox Tuesday evening. "International Understanding" was the topic of his address.

Dr. Collins said that "Today all civilized countries are bound together by a network of relationships: political, commercial, social, economic, religious and educational. These relationships defy boundry lines, national frontiers, continents and oceans."

The minister pointed out that "if ever an aggressive minority of this generation could learn to think, to respond to what is good and beautiful and true, and fair play, even if it were a small minority, it would go a long way in solving the problems of the world."

"Democracy is a way of life," he stated. "It means living together in such a way that every individual will have the fullest opportunity to develop his personality. Democracy calls for intelligence, laws to regulate man's doings, teamwork, and last but not least, democracy calls for the spirit of righteousness and social justice as is exemplified by the Lord Jesus."

Dr. Collins concluded by saying that "people are looking to your generation and mine for an example of 'International Understanding.'"

A short business meeting was held, at which time Miss Ellen Paulett, president of the club, presided. Reports were given from various committees. The program committee announced plans for a dinner meeting next month, at which time Mrs. James W. Wilshire, Jr., of Lynchburg, First Vice-President of the Virginia Federation of Woman's Clubs, will install the officers of the Appomattox Junior Woman's Club.

Hostesses for the evening were Mrs. Stanley Boyce, Mrs. David Carter, Mrs. Edwin Cawthorne and Miss Nina Barlow.

Abbitt Attacks Ike's Budget In Address In Roanoke Monday

Roanoke, Va., Jan. 23.- Representative Watkins M. Abbitt (D.-Va.) sharply attacked the Eisenhower Administration's 1957 budget in an address given this afternoon before the Virginia Association of Agricultural Fairs.

The Fourth District Congressman criticized the budget for "failing to present a true picture to the American people."

Representative Abbitt said he believed that the President's budget "not only fails to keep faith as a balanced budget but disregards promise of tax relief and ignores the opportunity to make substantial payments on the tremendous federal debt."

In a sharply worded address the Congressman said he was entirely opposed to the principle of non-essential spending which he said is evident in the present program. Abbitt claimed that the budget as presented can be balanced only if there is a continuation of the present economic condition.

He contended that the budget, as presented, pretends to be in balance while at the same time launching a "gigantic welfare program, the cost of which nobody knows."

The Congressman pointed particularly to the proposal for an expanded highway network, the federal school construction program and expanded public works projects in certain parts of the country. He listed a number of items which have risen in the past year.

Particularly concerned about the failure to apply payments on the federal debt, Abbitt said he considered it "financial irresponsibility that the present porsperity has failed to bring about a reduction in the federal debt."

He pointed out that despite reductions in federal spending the first two years of the present Administration the 1957 budget would place expenditures at a point higher than the amount spent during the height of the Korean War in 1952.

Abbitt further contended that there should be "an investigation by the Congress into the unexpended balance in the various departments. I am sure the American people would be amazed that there is presently unexpended within the Departments of the government more than $77 billion, and I feel that there should be an immediate stop to the business of appropriating money without any regard to the amounts being piled up within the federal bureaucracy."

The Congressman referred to the increases proposed by the Administration for domestic spending. He pointed out that within the 1957 budget the Administration proposes to increase domestic spending to $16.1 billion, an increase of more than $3 billion within the past two years.

Rev. Norfleet U.D.C. Speaker On Gen. Lee

Buffet style dinner was served at a meeting of the Appomattox Chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy Friday evening in the dining hall of the Liberty Baptist Church when chapter members and their guests met to pay homage to Gen. Robert E. Lee.

Miss Julia Asher, Historian of the chapter, introduced the Rev. Mr. Charles W. Norfleet, Jr., of St. Ann's Episcopal Church, who reviewed Lee's post-war life, with emphasis on Lee the Educator and Lee the Religious Man.

He recalled that on October 2, 1865, a simple service took place, installing Lee as President of Washington College at Lexington. At that service were five faculty members, the ministers of the community, and some fifty students. On December 2, Lee was joined there by his wife and family. The people of Lexington divided their substance with the new neighbors.

The first changes and improvements made by Lee in the college were in the realm of extension of the curriculum. The general effect was a broadening of the whole approach to education and to prepare young men of the South to face the difficult times following the War Between the States.

One of the attributes of Lee was his personal contact with the students. The student body increased rapidly and at the time of Lee's death had exceeded the 500 mark. His discipline was not of a military nature, as he did not deem that the proper procedure for young men in civil life. However, when the young students were found to be in the wrong, they were dealt with severely.

"Finally, we have the religious Lee," said the speaker. He revealed that although the college had no Chaplain, the college chapel was
